Dr. Regina Romero manages an independent consulting practice specializing in executive coaching, leadership and team development and group facilitation. With over thirty years of experience, she is a trusted confidante to senior leaders in the healthcare, research, manufacturing, service, and technology industries, as well as higher education and the public and non-profit sectors.

Throughout her career, she has been curious about the intersections of race, gender, culture, identity, leadership and systems. Over time, she has honed her craft to become an astute advisor to leaders as they work through difficult issues at multiple levels and navigate complex operational, political, cultural and people challenges that are central to organizational life.

Some of her recent clients include: Adtalem Global Education, Astra Zeneca, Democracy Fund, Dow, Florida State University, Humanity United, Indiana State Museum & Historic Sites, National Institutes of Health, NPR, PCORI, RLJ Companies, Robert H. Smith School of Business, Society of Behavioral Medicine, Sodexo, and the University of Maryland School of Medicine.

Previously, Regina was an adjunct faculty member of the National Leadership Institute at University of Maryland Global Campus and served as the Chief Trainer. Always mindful of the power of the group and the value of shared learning, Regina has been a member of the Executive Coaching Roundtable, a professional development group, for more than twenty years.

She received a Ph.D. in clinical psychology from George Washington University and a B.S. in psychology from Howard University. She is a licensed psychologist. Her coaching accreditation is through the International Society for Coaching Psychology. Regina is a member of the American Psychological Association Society of Consulting Psychology. Formerly, she served as the Vice President of the Board of Generation Hope which provides teen parents and their children the support and resources they need to thrive in college and kindergarten thereby driving a two-generation solution to poverty.
